

Wishing everyone a happy New Year 2023 – I hope you all had a great Christmas season this past year – WOW can you believe it is 2023! We here at Lone Star Historical Miniatures are looking forward to a great hobby year.

Looking back at 2022 it was great to be back to “normal” and collecting, painting and playing a lot more games. We had a VERY SUCCESSFUL MillenniumCon – thanks to all who attended and participated.

We will hold our annual Membership and Business meeting in January. This year we plan to have an in-person and Zoom meeting – more info to follow.

Lots of great events going on around Texas – visit the Events calendar inside the newsletter.

Napoleonic Naval Battle Report

By James McNease

The action of 25 September 1806 was a naval battle fought during the Napoleonic Wars off the French Biscay port of Rochefort.

Countries Ship's Name Commander

British HMS Centaur – 74 guns 3rd Rate Post Captain James Mallory

British HMS Monarch – 74 guns 3rd Rate Post Capt Lance Hardaway

French Minerve- 40 guns 5th Rate Commodore Adam Rios

French Glorie – 40 guns 5th Rate Captain Randy Lee

French Armide – 40 guns 5th Rate Commander Jean-Jacques – Adam Rios

A French squadron comprising five frigates and two corvettes, sailing to the French West Indies with supplies and reinforcements, was intercepted by a British squadron of six ships of the line that was keeping a close blockade of the port as part of the Atlantic campaign of 1806. The British ships, under the command of Commodore Sir Samuel Hood, spotted the French convoy early in the morning of 25 September, just a few hours after the French had left port, and immediately gave general chase.

Although the French ships tried to escape, they were heavily laden with troops and stores, and the strong winds favored the larger ships of the line, which caught the French convoy after a five-hour pursuit, although they had become separated from one another during the chase.

At 05:00 the leading British ship, HMS Centaur, was within range and opened fire on the French squadron, which divided. One frigate went north and was intercepted by HMS Mars, while another, accompanied by the two corvettes, turned south and managed to outrun HMS Windsor Castle.

The main body of the French force – Minerve, Gloire, and Armide – remained together and met the attack of Centaur and Monarch and the British flagship HMS Centaur with their broadsides.

With the wind coming from the northeast, Captain James Mallory and Captain Lance Hardaway found themselves at a disadvantage with the heavy swell that had suited his ship during the chase also prevented him from opening his lower gunports in case of flooding. This halved their available cannon

Although outnumbered and outclassed by the British squadron the French ships fought hard, inflicting damage on the leading British ships and severely wounding Commodore Hood. Eventually the strength of the British squadron told, and despite a fierce resistance the French ships surrendered one by one, the British capturing four of the seven vessels in the squadron.

A couple of photos from Flames of War Friday at Game Kastle - Austin, the last mission of our eastern front campaign! The German defenses were too much for the Soviet attackers, and in the final mission they were able to counterattack and keep the Soviets from seizing the key objectives in Operation Bagration. Thanks to everyone who participated, keep an eye out for what we'll be doing next year!

Seven Days To the Rhine Battle Report

We had a great game of 7 Days. Played an encounter battle between elements of the Warsaw Pact and a scratch NATO force of UK and US.

The WP had to move quickly as the NATO position was breaking down and rumors of Lance missile deployment in expectation of a rupture in NATO lines.

7 Days is fast and furious. One definitely has to pay attention as the system is action/reaction from start to finish.

I've been working on a small ancient's skirmish project lately. I am intrigued by Slaine by Warlord Games but wanted to give it a more historical twist. I am working on two warbands - Celts in keeping with the theme of the game, and the logical baddies to square off against them,

Romans! Here are some of the figures I have finished (yet to do the basing). I tried to give the Romans an "evil" color palette. If I feel motivated after playing a few games with these guys, I may paint up some undead legionnaires that I found 3D printing files for. Hoping to have these completely done in the next few days for the November painting challenge.

Figures are 3D printed from files from the March to Hell line and tweaked to make them 32mm scale and slimmer than the kinda chunky original proportions.

Got my Hernan Cortez miniature from Georgio in Greece. This figure is a resin 3D printed miniature. 28mm.

Also, got a unit of Aztec warrior priests and a representative of the Pontiff.

These figures are exquisite and not overpriced. He has tons of figures and the figures I've painted are all top quality. Highly recommended!
